Therefore, students must give their research work enough time to avoid common mistakes. If you are done with your task early you will have time to check for any plagiarism through software and you can make changes accordingly.

Proper citation

Citation is an important part of writing a research paper or an essay. You need to consult other research papers while writing your own. While expressing another's ideas in your paper or essay make sure to cite them properly otherwise it would be considered plagiarized. While writing an essay or a paper, an expert essay writer would give special attention to the citations to avoid any kind of plagiarism.

Paraphrase

Even if you are copying someone else's work, you must still give credit to them. When a student rephrases his or her sentences without losing the original meaning, he or she is said to be paraphrasing. You must compose the entire document in your terms, without substituting any words. The content as a whole must be original.

Proofread your document

Proofreading your essay or a research paper is very important when you are done with your task. You can proofread your document from a friend or your instructor or supervisor to help you with identifying mistakes and issues. A essay writing service will look if you have properly cited the information. It can help you to overcome the issue of plagiarism.

Quotation

Properly quote your references. To provide credit to the original author you can quote the idea or information taken from their work. For instance, you can copy the exact words of the other author. Add quotation marks around the passage or phrase and provide citation at the end. This way you will avoid plagiarism
